

Sometimes in Spring

By Marlowe Frank

Thick air waiting for the rain

The humid tension building

What the wind brings

Around still bare branches to flutter flags

With eyes closed

Does a beginning feel different from an end?

Can you hear or smell fall or spring

Before the flower buds and birds?

In gray between

The people know in pastel clothes

Restless rain booted child drumming

On still wet white plastic bench